In the following you will find a suggestion of how to record and organize your experiences and memories. All of the fields are optional.

How and what to record:
Name and Age:
The event you would like to remember, to re-encounter or compare with your present life habits: profession/activity/occupation, part of life:
Short introduction/description of the event:
The approximate date(s) of the original event:
The reason(s) for giving up:
1. The form:	2. The content:
–Writing a personal diary and or write a personal blog (link) –Updating any social networks (link) –Photos from the past and photos from the present –Videos –personal videos or videos that inspired you in the past (web, portal link, webtransfer...)	–Present facts/performance/ability. –Materials and documents from that past period, such as written personal conversations, e-mails, quotes from newspapers, blogs, books, films etc and anything else you found important at that time. –Measuring/ comparing present experiences with those in your history. –Remembering of your own expectations and the expectations of you by others –How do you assess these at the moment? Did you meet expectations? Do you find them important now? Do you find them unrealistic or objective today? –Changes that have happened to you, to others. Changes in the cultural climate. –How are changes in you and in you and in the local community are related. Did they influenced you or did you influence them? –What you would like to change in your history? Would you take different decisions? –Is there still time to make changes? If yes, what?

You can send your data to the following e-mail: martina.miholic@gmail.com and they will be presented at the Private View of Art Lab # 2, in gepard 14, on June 28 either anonymously or not – just as you request. The deadline for sending your documents is June 21, 2013

You can get an insight into the work of Martina at www.martinamiholic.com. The website will be updated with this project about June 9.